E-3 VISAS

-What is an E-3 Visa?

-The E-3 is a new visa category only for Australians coming to the US to work temporarily in a specialty occupation.

-Who qualifies for the E-3 visa?

-The new E-3 visa classification currently applies only to nationals of Australia as well as their spouses and children. E-3 principal applicants must be coming to the United States solely to work in a specialty occupation. The spouse and children need not be Australian citizens.

-Are there other requirements for qualifying for an E-3 visa?

-To qualify, applicants must meet the definition of "specialty occupation" set forth at INA 214(i)(1). Applicants must also submit job offer letters from a United States-based employer, evidence of a Department of Labor attestation (certified ETA 9035 or 9035E), evidence of a bachelor's degree and proof of payment of the application fee.

-What is a specialty occupation?

-In general, a specialty occupation is one that requires theoretical and practical application of a body of knowledge in professional fields and at least the attainment of a bachelor's degree, or its equivalent, as a minimum for entry into the occupation in the United States. The Department's regulations governing E-3 visas incorporate the definitions contained in section 214(i)(1) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (INA).

-May spouses work?

-E-3 spouses are entitled to work in the United States and may apply for an Employment Authorization Document (Form I-765) through USCIS.

-Is there a limit to the amount of E-3 visas?

-Yes, there will be a maximum of 10,500 E-3 visas issued annually. Spouses and children of principal applicants do not count against the numerical limitations.

-Do I need a petition by my employer to the Department of Homeland Security?

-The United States-based employer of an E-3 principal is not required to submit a petition to the Department of Homeland Security as a prerequisite for visa issuance. However, the employer must obtain a Labor Condition Application, ETA Form 9035 from the Department of Labor.

-How long will my visa be valid?

-The validity of the visa should not exceed the validity period of the LCA. The Department of State and DHS have agreed to a 24-month maximum validity period for E-3 visas. This validity may be renewed.

-What is the fee for an E-3 visa?

-Other than the normal application fee, there is no issuance fee.

- Is there a new visa for Americans who want to work in Australia in "specialty occupations?"

- The 457 visa will accommodate Americans who wish to work in Australia. We refer you to the Government of Australia for further comment.
